Jim Hughes

By Elizabeth Cowley

Robert Ernst, Richard Ely and Jim Hughes took their seats as newly elected board members of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) at the regular monthly meeting on December 18 at the Monterey City Council Chambers.

Jim Hughes is beginning his 9th year as Director representing Division 4. Mr. Hughes said "I was a strong supporter of the dam, but I got the message" adding that he did not think a dam should be removed from the list of possible alternatives to augment the water supply.

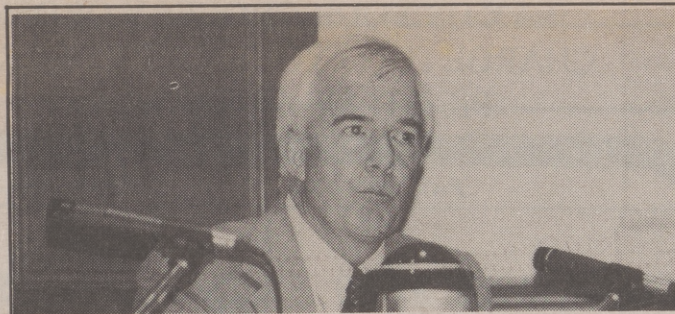

Robert Ernst, Director for Division 3, said "I would have liked to build the dam, I think it would have been a lot of fun to work on a project of that size." Mr. Ernst further said that he was a conservative not particularly in favor of regional or wasteful government and that the role of the MPWMD, in light of the defeat of Measure C, will be redefined in the next few months.

Richard Ely, Director for Division 5, thanked the voters for their support and confidence. Mr. Ely said the "defeat of Measure C is an opportunity" adding that he would like to talk the various interest groups in the community to devise new solutions to augment the water supply.

Darlene Burkleo was elected as the MPWMD Chair. Director Karas nominated Director Lou Haddad for the position of Vice Chair as it was Director Haddad's turn for this position in accordance with MPWMD rules. There was no second for this nomination and the other board members opted to change the rules of succession and elected new board member, Mr. Ely, as Vice Chair. Director Karas opposed this action as he believed it created further division in the board and that the other board members were saying that the people who elected Director Haddad to represent their division were not worthy of equal representation. The board members supporting Mr. Ely said that Director Haddad's views were not consistent with the rest of the board.

Director Haddad asked the board to consider placing an item on the March ballot to allow the voters to decide whether the MPWMD should be dissolved. Several people spoke during this public hearing and the overwhelming opinion was that the measure was premature because the voters could not make an informed decision about what would happen if the MPWMD was dissolved.

Richard Ely

Other comments included that the MPWMD spends too much taxpayer money on above average employee salaries and benefits and that a dam should be removed from consideration by the MPWMD and any future agency taking over its responsibilities. The board voted 4-2 against allowing the voters to decide whether the MPWMD should be dissolved.

The MPWMD will hold a special study session on "Water Supply Alternatives" on Thursday, February 8 at the Monterey City Council Chambers. The time is not yet decided but you can call the district at 649-4866. The purpose of the workshop is to discuss water supply augmentation alternatives, water demand reduction options and to obtain community input and direction.

Mr. Fuerst's salary was not set. It will be the subject of future negotiation and Board action. No new District staff will be hired to replace Fuerst as Senior Hydrologist.

Heisler Competition poses unique questions for moot court

Monterey College of Law announced four finalists in the sixth Francis Heisler Moot Court Competition to be held on January 19, 1996 at the Monterey Institute of International Studies Irvine Auditorium.

The Competition is a living tribute to Francis Heisler, a nationally known civil rights lawyer, long time Monterey County resident, and benefactor of the College. Students of constitutional law will present oral arguments before a distinguished panel of judges, including Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver.

The students will argue a hypothetical case involving terrorist speech in cyberspace. "May the government require private internet companies to monitor anti-government speech? Can the internet be shut down when messages mix politics with terrorist planning?"

McPherson fights to keep Mussel Watch Program

The Mussel Watch Program, a 20 year old monitoring effort in which mussels are routinely tested for contaminants in coastal waters, could be ended due to state budget cuts. On December 13, members of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary Advisory Council met with State Assemblyman Bruce McPherson to garner support for the State Mussel Watch Program. "This program is an excellent indicator of the health of Sanctuary waters and should be saved," commented Karin Strasser Kauffman, Chair of the Sanctuary Advisory Council.

Mussels and other bivalves constantly filter water for nutrients and, in the process, store any contaminants in their tissues. By analyzing the tissue of mussels, scientists can detect potential water quality problems and identify habitat areas that need additional study. "This can give us the information we need to detect and correct problems early, before they harm marine resources in the Sanctuary," said Terry Jackson, Sanctuary Manager.

Assemblyman Bruce McPherson (27th District) expressed full support for the program and its importance to coastal water quality managers. "This program has a documented history of success and a broad spectrum of support from state and federal agencies. The information gained from the program is invaluable to resource managers protecting our ocean resources," McPherson said.

Sanctuary Advisory Council representatives met with Assemblyman McPherson to explore legislative options to keep the program operating. Since the mussels are "natural monitors", there is no cost for expensive monitoring equipment, installation, repair or replacement. Program expenses simply cover the cost of laboratory and statistical analysis.

"You may now kiss the bride, or whatever it is you kids do nowadays."

"The Sanctuary Advisory Council received several pleas from the community to save this program, and we strongly support it," said Strasser Kauffman. According to Mark

Pickett, Sanctuary Assistant Manager, "the state of fitness of these mussels tells us the state of fitness for entire habitat areas in the Sanctuary. That's an incredibly valuable management tool."

It's hard to think ahead to baseball season when basketball seems to rule the playgrounds and gyms - not to mention the side walls of houses or the fronts of garages. Nonetheless, Carmel Valley Little League sign-ups and try-outs are only a few weeks away (we'll wait until after the Super Bowl frenzy), so herewith a few tips on how to prepare everyone in the family for the up-coming season of Baseball in Paradise.

First, it's very important to look at Little League from the player's perspective. An important question is, why participate in Little League at all? For whose benefit? Parents need to be really clear about their personal motivations and really clear about how dedicated the child is to the program. No player succeeds if he or she is living out parental fantasies.

Little League is about skill and competition, yes, but it is foremost about children at play.

Second, it is important to make sure everyone involved has the time to devote to the season. Is transportation going to be a problem? What about school work or parental jobs? The mixture of hyper-busy parents and super-involved kids is a recipe for disaster. You can't steal home with your mind on homework.

Third, you might want to check over the equipment locker at home. Does the old mitt need a touch of neat's-foot oil? How about the collection of bats - too many dents from hitting fungo-rocks into the river? Are the grips grippy enough? What of last year's nice white pants - still big enough? It's not too early to begin thinking about those matters.

Fourth, you should be prepared for some expenses which may result from the considerations above. If you have all the equipment already, there may still come some rather loud demands for the newest and shiniest, the bat guaranteed to put one in the river, or the Mitt that Never Misses. Shoes don't come cheap (one of the sons of this column sports size 14), and accessories like fielder's dark glasses (by Alvin Dark?) or super double-hetrodyne quadruple-padded batting gloves may also prove a bit of a financial drain. However, there is always the magic word, "No."

Another point to ponder: please review a few simple local ground rules with everyone in the family. The CVLL Park is an alcohol-free zone. The stands, the dug-outs, and the snack bar are tobacco-free zones. We'd like the whole place to be a litter-free zone. When you come driving down for practice or for the big game, use Paso Cresta to get to the park, Paso Hondo to leave. The speed limit in the parking lot is the speed of an ambling player, and the speed limit on Paso Hondo and Paso Cresta is equal to that of the slowest dog. And speaking of dogs, please leave your golden retrievers or any other pet at home - in spite of all the wonderful used hamburger scraps available under the stands. As for fan exuberance, be kind and understanding to coaches, players, umpires - especially umpires - unless you are prepared to demonstrate on the spot, that you can do a superior job. And perhaps you'd like to keep the air-horns, cow-bells, and Aunt Millie's collection of antique New Year's noisemakers at home. We thank you for your gentle attention to these matters.

Finally, now is the time to begin to think about starting a bit of practice, a bit of warm-up. Start with simple stuff, just tossing the ball around, getting the hand-eye coordination sharpened up again. Don't forget that Gary Pennington is conducting monthly "y'all come down to the field and play a bit of ball" sessions on the first Sunday of the month. Get the muscles limbered up; there is nothing more embarrassing than to throw out the first pitch only to throw out one's arm instead.

Until the next column, we want to wish you a joyous and peaceful New Year, a year filled not only with the special pleasures of playing baseball in paradise, but also the great good fortune of living in this beautiful valley. We'll see you on the field soon.

The Sun's Real Estate Dictionary

Reverse Annuity Mortgage (RAM): A form of mortgage which enables elderly homeowners to borrow against the equity in their homes so they can receive monthly payments needed to help meet living costs. Under this plan, the inflow and outflow of funds is in reverse to the standard conventional loan. The homeowner receives periodic payments (not necessarily equal payments) based on accumulated equity; the payments are made directly by the lender or through the purchase of an annuity from an insurance company. The loan comes due either upon a specific date or upon the occurrence of a specific event, such as sale of the property or death of the borrower.

S - Statement of Information (SI): A confidential information statement completed by the buyer, seller and borrower in every transaction where a policy or policies of title insurance are requested. Allows the title company to competently search documents affecting the property. Allows title companies to differentiate between parties with similar names when searching matters such as liens and court decrees.

"Subject To" Clause: A clause in a contract of sale setting forth any contingencies or special conditions of purchase and sale, such as an offer made and accepted subject to financing, securing certain zoning or similar requirements.

Subordination Agreement: An agreement under which a prior or superior lien is made inferior or subject to an otherwise junior lien.

T - Tax Lien: A statutory lien imposed against real property for nonpayment of taxes.

Tenancy in Common: Co-ownership in a property by two or more persons, each of whom has an undivided interest in the whole property.

Title Plant: The information warehouse of a title company in which it has accumulated and is constantly updating title records of properties in its area which it can use to search title to real property.

Trustee: A person who holds title in trust for the benefit of another. In a deed of trust, the trustee is the person named to hold title in trust for the benefit of the lender until the loan is paid off.

Trustor: The borrower under a deed of trust. One who deeds their property as security for repayment of a loan.

U - Uniform Settlement Statement: The standard HUD Form 1 required to be given to the borrower, lender and seller at, or prior to, settlement.

Unmarketable Title: Title which contains defects that would allow a purchaser to be released from his obligation to purchase.

V - Vesting: Denotes the manner in which title is held. Examples of common vestings are: Community Property, Joint Tenancy and Tenancy in Common.

Veterans Administration (VA): VA has power and authority to guarantee or insure payment of loans made to veterans by private lending institutions. This function is similar to that of FHA. VA also makes direct loans to veterans in non-urban areas where private loan funds are not available.

LITTLE BY LITTLE, OUR WATERS ARE LOOKING LESS LIKE ART AND MORE LIKE TRASH.

There are toxic chemicals in our water. Such as oil. And pesticides.

You might think industry is to blame. But they're only part of the problem. You and I, in our everyday lives, are also responsible for a tremendous amount of water pollution.

However, we can all help protect our water. For example, use less toxic household cleaners and practice natural lawn care by composting and using fewer chemicals. And instead of pouring used motor oil onto the ground or into storm drains, simply take it to a gasoline station where it can be recycled.

To find out more, call 1-800-504-8484, and we'll send you additional information on how you can help protect our rivers, lakes and oceans.

That way we can turn this terrible tide around. And restore the beauty to our water.

AS THE RIVER RUNS

Norman Spaulding

Government is not the answer to the success of our nation. Government is the facilitator to maintain a climate in which the people of our nation can succeed by their own effort and contribution.

According to Milton Friedman, the government now consumes over 43% of every dollar earned by individuals and businesses. Friedman goes on to point out a fundamental difference between private business and government spending. When a business suffers losses (i.e., its goods or services are not needed or poorly managed,) it will go out of business. Failing government continues in perpetuity driven by the union pressure to maintain the government jobs, even when the services are failing or non-existent.

Government in our republic has a very limited role. First, to protect and defend our borders and other international interests. Second, it may from time to time, assist in the creation of infrastructure (roads, railroads, waterways, airports, etc.) which enhance private enterprise, and transportation for goods and people. Third, to protect our resources and environment for the future.

80% of the money we spend in taxes goes to government salaries and benefits, leaving a paltry 20% for actual services and goods that benefit the working population of America.

In America today, less than 10% of the population works in wealth producing occupations. The rest of the population is retired, children, welfare beneficiaries, disabled or parents at home. However, we have achieved this surrealistic state of national leisure only by building a massive national debt.

Getting the ship of America out of debt means sacrifice by those who do not work. It means radical reductions in corporate and public welfare (social security, direct welfare) and medical/health costs.

We must also face curtailment of government subsidies to individuals, who choose to live in and businesses that locate in, known high risk flood zones, fire areas, hurricane zones, known earthquake zones and tidal zones. Yes, we should save lives when homes collapse in these danger areas, but the physical losses to private property should be born by the property owners.

We need to question the action of spending 80% of our public medical dollars on people who are non-productive, over 65 years of age, and who will live less than 2 years following the major medical intervention.

Watching our national government dilly-dally over a seven year plan to balance the budget is a terrible hoax, when the real catastrophe our nation faces is a four trillion dollar deficit.

Starting toward balancing the budget is a miniscule bit of lip service masking the real problem of decades of irresponsible government overspending that has left us with a deficit which gobbles up 20% of our annual budget.

Some members of County Staff, Planning Commission, Fish and Game, CalTrans, State Parks, Native Plant Society, Sierra Club, Carmel River Steelhead Association, CVPOA, Audobon Society, State Water Rights staff, MidValley Fire Dept.; adjoining property owners and many local citizens, all have serious doubts and concerns about this project as submitted.

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

Well, sure, I'm firmly opposed to the idiocy of our World Policeman Crusade in Bosnia, but I have to admire the public relations idea of one of our generals, or perhaps a colonel, who had a lot of our guys set up in tents in time for the first extra heavy rain to rouse them out with a foot of water. What a terrific way to let those Bosnians know that we Americans are just regular people, just like they are, who don't necessarily always do everything right.

On a lighter subject, can anybody out there tell me why so many people will complain about rising prices, but so few of us seem to look at prices on grocery items, for example. There must be an assumption that every store keeps prices as low as they can to benefit customers. Well, it doesn't work that way. In fact, there are even smoke and mirror gimmicks, something like in Washington, D.C. One chain grocery will sometimes double the price of an item for one day, so that they can then drop to the regular price for the rest of the week with a big "half price" sign on it.

Gasoline prices are one of my pet peeves. A little over 30 years ago I went before our county supervisors in an attempt to get an ordinance that would require gas stations to post their gas prices so they could be seen from the street, in fairness to motorists. Just about every service station owner in the whole county showed up on the day of the hearing, and my suggestion went forthwith out the window. Many years later my idea was put into effect, maybe from Sacramento.

However, just as with buying groceries without much concern about costs, there isn't enough "shopping for prices" to affect prices. Got any idea how long it would take for gas prices to drop if everybody was willing to look at the prices? However, some vehicles might not perform well on cheaper grades of gas, and some of us appreciate having our windshields cleaned, or at least, having materials available, including air and water.

LETTERS to the Editor

Questions San Carlos

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

The true side of Rancho San Carlos Development is also the negative side.

and master plans be followed like the rest of us have to do.

The proposed preserve is a joke. Over 100 miles of roads and fences, estate houses, hotel, lodge, stores, post office, sewer plant, two sports centers, equestrian center, fire department, quarry and a maintenance yard are all strewn between the 31 parcels of preserve. The development is spread out from one end of the property to the other, and is an insult to the term Preserve. The only place one will not observe these structures is from the private Rancho San Carlos Road. The public who enjoys the spectacular drive up Robinson Canyon Rd. will have their view spoiled forever. 519 acres of commercial and visitor serving areas will be seen from this scenic county road. Half the land dedicated to Preserve is steep and unbuildable. The other half is 239 privately owned backyards. All lands are to be dedicated in phases over 20 years, if at all. Worst yet another water guzzling private golf course, though the EIR recommends against it.

This plan needs a new concept of what is good for the future of this area, not how much money the owners can squeeze out of it. They will form a CSA using taxpayers' money for private development and could incorporate, then Monterey County might not get their anticipated tax windfall.

Get involved, read the facts, ask questions, talk to your supervisors and write letters, but don't come back in a few years and say, "How did this happen?" Don't let the answer be you and Mr. Apathy.

Neighbor challenges Darcy goat farm editorial

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

The December 28, 1995 article by Grace Darcy was the second completely biased one I've read from her in recent months regarding the Cox goat dairy in Cachagua. First of all, who is Grace Darcy and, as any responsible reporter should do, why has she never contacted the Martins or the Tegtmeiers who she so loosely and libelously refers to with such authority? This really should not be a neighborhood issue, but between Monterey County and the Coxes.

My first reaction to the article is, so what? So what if the Coxes have a Grade A dairy license from the State of California or love their goats or receive awards? Do these exonerate them from going through the county process to have a commercial dairy in their chosen place of operation? Why does Grace Darcy choose to believe all the information Ana Cox aka Ana Iverson feeds her and completely disregard impacted neighbors' legitimate complaints, the county file documenting consistent blatant noncompliance, the zoning administrator's and planning commission's denial of a use permit and a variance because they do not fulfill any of the criteria for either? Why has she not researched the fact that the Coxes somehow secured a loan in May 1995 and did more large scale building and grading after being ordered by a Monterey County Municipal Court Judge to cease operations and building until they were granted the proper permits?

Cox wants us to believe that she thought she had all the permits she needed for a commercial dairy because she received an agricultural exemption for a 480 sq. ft. milking barn in 1987. This exemption clearly states conditions, including one that it is not to be used for commerce. Incidentally, there never was a 480 sq. ft. milking barn, but an almost 1000 sq. ft. milking barn (nullifying the agricultural exemption) and four other buildings - all without building permits, a use permit (which was required even before Title 21), or a variance. And she believed all of these were covered under her "agricultural exemption?" Tie the bull outside, Ana Cox. In fact, they do not even have a final permit on their house, which was first applied for in the early 1980s.

So why do I care? I care because their activities are severely infringing upon the rights of their close neighbors who were never given their due process through public hearings to protect their interests and investments (the "neighbors" Darcy quotes in her article live as far away as Salinas). There is not one property owner who resides on a neighboring parcel who is in favor of this dairy. To become a Grade A dairy, the Coxes had to go through major renovations in late 1992-93 that caused this serious impact on the neighborhood. It is bogus to state that they have been running this dairy for 18 years.

I resent the fact that the Coxes are being presented as victims and the close neighbors, who have every right to oppose this commercial operation, as "loudmouthed witchhunters." Ana Iverson Cox has a history of disregard for her neighborhood going back to her Hidden Hills days before moving to Cachagua. The Coxes have proven themselves to be scofflaws who play upon the sympathy of whoever will listen to their tales of woe of how they have been wronged. Grace Darcy, you've been had.

Carmel Valley

Resident says Darcy only told one side of story

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Our names are Greg and Mary Martin and we have lived in Cachagua next to Ana Iverson-Cox for 15 years. We have read letters and articles about the now infamous dairy on her property and felt that the authors were misinformed about this matter. We felt ultimately the truth would prevail and didn't feel we needed to join the media circus surrounding this story. But after reading Grace Darcy's article in the Dec. 28th issue of the Carmel Valley Sun, we can no longer be silent.

Grace Darcy has used the media to unfairly attack us. She claims in one of her articles that she has done a thorough investigation of this matter. It sounds to us like her investigation consisted of a long interview with Ana Iverson-Cox, a phone call to Zoning Administrator Dale Ellis, and not much else. She writes with authority about the motives of the opposing neighbors, ourselves included, but we have never been contacted by her. We have attempted to reach her by phone, but she has yet to return our call. We don't think she wants to hear what we have to say.

Darcy, the press and media need to stop implying that this is a long established dairy. It is well documented that the mechanized milking facility and adjacent cheese processing plant didn't go into production until June, 1994.

The truth is, for years Ana Iverson-Cox has been in violation of Monterey County Building and Zoning Laws. She only made application for her unlawful development after the District Attorney of Monterey County began proceedings to charge her with criminal non-compliance with building codes, not, as Darcy says "in response to Title 21's new requirements". Her claim that a 1987 agricultural exemption for a 480 sq. ft. structure was "all she thought she needed" to build a commercial dairy, is laughable, but we're not laughing. Monterey County Building Code 18.04.100 states that for a structure to qualify for an agricultural exemption from a building permit it must be under 500 sq. ft. and cannot have plumbing, heating or electric in it. More importantly, the ag exemption signed by H. William Clarke, that Darcy refers to specifically states: This building cannot be used for the purpose of labor, commerce or human occupancy.

Ana Iverson-Cox' ag exemption became null and void because all of the listed conditions and requirements were violated. To date there is not one legal structure on her property.

Casting the bones to divine events for 1996, weather may prove to be the economic pacemaker for the year. 1996 weather will be dominated by "La Nina" conditions in the Pacific Ocean and by a cyclical low point in sunspot activity, both of which imply colder winters and hotter summers than we have been used to in recent years. If true, investments involving natural gas, anti-freeze, car batteries, air conditioning and home entertainment might do well. Investments involving retail sales, home construction, transportation and grain crops might not do well. It wouldn't hurt to buy an almanac and review the forecast.

The national budget will continue to be a smoldering issue, and not just because of "money". The budget debate this year determines our social priorities for decades to come. It is a painful process because there is no more insulation against economic short circuits, both domestically and in our global relations. Politicians absolutely must make a commitment this year, and nobody will be happy with the results: like the weather, life in our country will continue as it has in recent years. If true, investments involving social services such as health, education, elder and infant care, law enforcement and immigration will be more volatile than we might expect. Somebody is going to make a lot of money in the prison industry, for example. And a cure for AIDS may not enrich its producer, if we find our county health programs cannot afford to make it available.

Tax revision will be interesting. We will learn, but maybe not understand, that increasing taxes on higher incomes won't be enough to solve our debt and budget problems... there just are not enough wealthy Americans to tax. If true, anticipate a tax process involving everyone who earns and spends money in this country, as a flat tax or national sales tax in some degree. And anticipate higher premiums to participate in Medicare. And anticipate tradeoffs to deflect wealthier citizens from applying for their Social Security retirement benefits.

It may not be too much to say, perhaps at this time next year, that 1996 is the year we opt for financial independence as a personal and as a national goal. I know my New England friends will regard that statement with keen intensity, and if there is a response it most likely will be, "Well...it all depends upon the weather, don'tcha know."

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Modems

This part was previously planned to cover the BBS in this area but two of the five were off-line this week and I have not yet been able to ascertain whether it is temporary. Next week, I hope. According to the statistics over half of computer owners have no modem installed, and it is at these users that the next few parts of this series will be directed. After that we will begin a very down to earth series for absolute beginners.

All that is needed to turn the computer into a communications device is a modem, which can now be bought from about $50 and upwards, and an ordinary phone line.

The word modem is an acronym for MODulate - DEModulate, which is a description of the operational processes involved. To explain this further, it must be understood that communications within the computer and between the computer and most peripherals such as printers are what is known as digital.

In digital operations the information is passed in small discrete chunks actually, as we will see shortly, in zeroes (0) and ones (1). In contrast, communications via ordinary telephone equipment are called analog and are characterized by signals that vary continuously in time. In order then, for the computer to transfer information over telephone lines, its discrete information has to be transferred into a signal that can be transferred via ordinary telephone line, i.e. noise. A fax machine is a device that converts the digital information scanned from the page into noise. Lift the fax phone while a transmission is in progress and you will hear just noise. Thus the modem converts the 0s and 1s into noise for transmission or, for incoming signals, does the reverse - converts the noise back into 0s and 1s.

All digital transmissions are possible via what is known as ISDN (Integrated Services Data Network) equipment. ISDN phones cost several hundred dollars, and the monthly service charges are about twice what we pay for regular phones, but the clarity of tone and speed of transmissions are outstanding. We will deal with ISDN in a future issue.

Several codes have been developed for representing characters such as the letters of the alphabet, numbers, punctuation marks and special characters such as @, #, $, %, etc. The best known code is ASCII - American Standard Code for Information Interchange and the most common version of it ASCII-8, which represents characters by strings of eight 0s and 1s. Actually these 0s and

Is are called "bits", an acronym for binary digits. A computer "byte" is a little chunk of information with 8 bits, in contrast to mosquito bytes and love bytes. For example, the letter "a" is represented by 11100001 and "A" by 10100001. Thus, when a computer wishes to send an ASCII character, it sends the string of eight bits, that represent that character. However, to keep characters separate it is usual to send start and stop bits with each one; moreover, as an error checking device, another bit called a "parity" bit is often sent as well.

In the next couple of parts we will look at modem characteristics and how to choose a good one.

Play Better Golf with JACK NICKLAUS

COMPACTED WET SAND IS MUCH EASIER TO PLAY FROM THAN POWDERY DRY SAND. BEGIN BY POSITIONING THE BALL OPPOSITE YOUR LEFT HEEL AND ALIGNING THE FACE OF YOUR SAND WEDGE WIDE OPEN.

NOW SWING THE CLUB BACK OUTSIDE AND LOW, THEN HIT DOWN AND THROUGH ABOUT AN INCH BEHIND THE BALL. THE CUSHIONING EFFECT OF THE FIRM SAND, ALONG WITH THE LOW BACKSWING AND OPEN FACE, WILL KEEP THE CLUB FROM DIGGING TOO DEEPLY.

She has yet to get a final on her residence which she began prior to 1981. In fact, the ag exemption should have never been issued because of existing violations on the property.

We bought our property adjacent to the Iverson-Cox property in 1981. The trailer we lived in until 1988 had a legal Use Permit. It is, to say the least, a cheap shot for Darcy to try to discredit us by implying that we were "possible illegal". In 1988 we attained a building permit for our home and received a final in December of that year.

As owners of a legally developed piece of property we have every right to defend our home and property value against unlawful development. Ana Iverson-Cox denied us the opportunity to speak at a public hearing about this use before it happened. After living next to a dairy for one and a half years we understand the thinking behind a 40 acre minimum for dairies. The smell and noise alone have severely damaged the quality of life we have worked very hard to attain.

Ana Iverson-Cox did not play by the rules and got caught. Now she claims it's everyone else's fault and won't accept responsibility for her erroneous actions. We are highly outraged by Grace Darcy's biased participation in further complicating this matter, and feel that in the future your paper should be more responsible about what it prints.

Water Board delays on vote to dissolve

Responding to citizens representing a cross section of political views, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD)

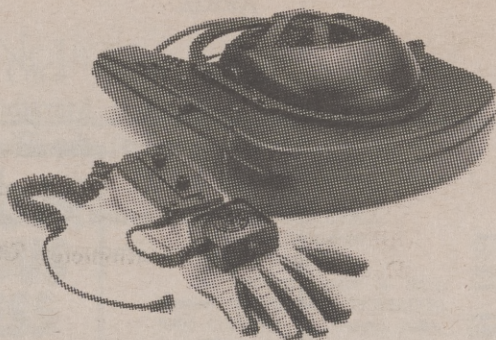

Board voted 4-2 on December 18 to not set a ballot measure in March 1996 on dissolution of the District. Director Lou Haddad had requested

Class of '80 average cost: about $10,800 for four years of college

Class of '95 average cost: about $26,000

Class of '10 projected cost: about $60,000

Reality is expensive.

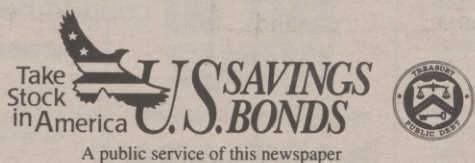

Prepare yourself for college with U.S. Savings Bonds.

Today, parents shell out over twice what tuition and fees cost in the early 80s. Those $300 typewriters have been replaced by $1,900 computers. So what will it cost when your children are ready? And what will replace the computer — a virtual reality college simulator?

Better start saving now for those future college costs with U.S. Savings Bonds. They're guaranteed safe, earn Treasury-based rates, are guaranteed to earn interest for 30 years, and you can get them through most banks or through employers offering the Payroll Savings Plan. And families and individuals who use Savings Bonds for college tuition may qualify for a special tax exclusion.*

that the Board set an election in March 1996 to determine whether the District should be abolished.

In nearly 45 minutes of public testimony, citizens expressed concern that a March election was premature and there was not adequate information with which to make an informed decision. Concern about the loss of local control was also expressed. No member of the public asked the water Board to set a March 1996 election.

Charles Page of Carmel recommended a citizen task force to evaluate options. Robert Hunsicker of Carmel Valley said the new board needs a chance to respond to the community. Sean Flavin of Monterey stated that information on alternatives needs to be developed before a vote. Environmental activist David Dilworth suggested that an EIR be done on the ramifications of dissolution. Carmel architect Michael Waxer said that the community needs direction and leadership, not more confusion.

Seaside leader Helen Rucker suggested that money would be better spent on focus groups rather than a dissolution election. Hospitality industry representative Don Boston stated it would be wrong to make a premature judgment. Supervisorial candidate David Potter stated the District should move forward with a new mission. Assembly candidate Fred Keely stated that opponents to the dam want to be part of the solution to water supply problems. The need to focus on non-dam alternatives was echoed by Keith Vandevere of Citizens for Alternative Water Solutions and Don Gruber of the Sierra Club.

The majority of Water Board members concurred that a March election is too premature, but did not rule out a November vote. Newly elected Director Richard Ely, along with newly appointed General Manager Darby Fuerst are meeting with State Senator Henry Mello to discuss Mello's concerns about the District. District leaders hope to resolve Mello's concerns and chart a path of action that is best for the community.

Water Board spends more money in search of options for survival

With the help of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD), a University of Rhode Island professor and the U.S. Geological Survey are learning more about the interaction between seawater and drinking water supply sources in Carmel Valley.

There presently is no seawater intrusion into the Carmel Valley. Information gained from the research project will help the District manage the Carmel River basin to continue to prevent seawater intrusion.

For about the last year, Dr. Dan Urish, a professor of environmental engineering at the University of Rhode Island, has been collecting water level and quality data from Water District monitor wells at Carmel River State Beach. Water District staff have helped Urish in the field and have provided environmental data collected from the District's surface and ground water monitoring stations in the vicinity. The Water District also contributed $1000 toward the U.S. Geological Survey research project.

"The information from this work will enable us to better predict how seawater could flow inland through the deep beach sands into Carmel Valley in response to pumping of wells farther up the valley," said Joe Oliver, District Hydrogeologist. "Armed with this knowledge, we can continue to manage our water supply system to prevent seawater intrusion."

The Water District presently has about 50 monitor wells throughout Carmel Valley. Data collected from the wells provides information on water quality, the quantity of storage reserves, the interaction between the Carmel River and ground water resources, and how pumping from water wells affects the water resource system.
